Small Business Administration Disaster Relief Loans Guidance

We've been busy advocating for our members on many fronts, including highlighting access to business loans and other funds that may be available to assist in these unprecedented times. To that end, NATA recently learned that all small businesses impacted by the current situation should complete the Small Business Administration Disaster Relief loan application and submit if your state is declared as such.

Please keep the following points in mind:

- A small business is an organization with 500 or less employees.
- If your state has yet to declare a disaster, it is recommended that you complete the form and have it ready for immediate submission.
- As SBA has never experienced this amount of demand at one time, the sooner the application is submitted the closer to the front of the line your business may be.
- We're told the process is slow as many millions of businesses are filing applications, please be patient and persistent.
- Both for profits and not-for-profits are eligible to apply.
- Additionally, it may be easier to obtain the limit of $300K. For those looking for more assistance, the process may be more involved.
